My dear Sir,
I take great pleasure in sending you the enclosed photographs. Will you please tell your secretary, who was so very courteous to us during your absence, that when I get home and have a little leisure I shall send him some prints from negatives taken on our journey.

The only one which needs explanation is perhaps the rocks. It was taken as we were leaving Gibraltar.

I must apologize for some of the others.
Most unhappily neither negative of the down was good.

However, I send them, feeling that you may be interested even if they have no particular merit.

Will you kindly present my compliments to your secretary and accept from me and my sister our very warmest thanks.

Visiting you was a privilege which we shall both long remember.

I trust, sir, that your sister is gaining in strength, and that she will soon be quite herself.

With many thanks again.

Believe me, sir,

Very cordially yours
